Day 1

In his inaugural address Abraham Lincoln said he had no intent to invade Southern states nor did he intend to end slavery where it existed rather only control it's spread into the west, he also said that he would use force to maintain possession of Federal property.

Day 2

The Southern economy nearly collapsed during the war there were multiple reasons for this the severe deterioration of food supplies, the failure of Southern railroads, the loss of control of the main rivers, foraging by Northern armies and the seizure of animals and crops by confederate armies.
